personal injury law

Whether you have tripped over a paving stone or been involved in a road traffic accident, you may have a claim for compensation if you have suffered an injury and someone else is to blame.

Can you claim?

The law imposes strict rules concerning the time period in which a claim for an injury can be made. If your accident occurred within the last three years and you have not already made a claim for any injury that you sustained, you may be able to make a claim.

In cases involving children, a claim can be started any time before their 21st birthday.

Funding your claim

There are a number of ways in which a personal injury claim can be funded:

- 'no win, no fee'
- legal expenses insurance (your home and motoring insurance policies may provide you with cover)
- trade union membership

Whichever way you decide to fund your claim, we will provide you with the necessary guidance to ensure that you fully understand how our professional fees will be paid.

Do you have a choice?

Many motor insurance companies will push you to use their 'preferred' lawyers. These are usually firms who pay the insurance company several hundreds of pounds in order to deal with your claim, and so are not necessarily selected on their merit. These firms may also be based at the other end of the country, which means that you are unlikely to ever have a face-to-face meeting with the person representing you.

Your insurance company is not legally permitted to insist that you use their preferred lawyers. Instead, you should carefully select a firm based upon their qualifications, expertise and whether they are 'right' for you.

The professionals

Our personal injury specialists are all fully qualified solicitors authorised and regulated by the Solicitors Regulation Authority. They are highly skilled and will work with you to achieve the best result possible.

The team is led by Paul Williams, who is an accredited member of the Law Society's Personal Injury Panel in recognition of his expertise in personal injury law.

How can we help?

In addition to helping you gain compensation for your injury, we can also assist you in the recovery of other losses which you may have incurred as a result of your injury, such as loss of earnings, prescription charges, car hire and the cost of any private treatment.
